Host your next backyard barbecue and have space on the grill for mouthwatering ribs, tender chicken, succulent sausage and a whole lot more. Pay special attention to these features when shopping for a performance-minded, large Weber propane grill for your backyard: Cooking Area: Large grills that feature 400 to 600 square inches of cooking space help you feed dozens or make multiple food items all at once. Number of Burners: More burners equal more control over your heat. Models with three, four, five or six burners provide multiple heat zones, so you can have thick chops, thinly-sliced meats and low-and-slow veggies going at the same time. Back burners provide even more heating options for cooking and keeping food warm. BTU Output: A higher BTU rating means that the grill will use more fuel, providing a consistent and even cooking temperature during each use. Every Weber propane grill is equipped to provide an adequate BTU level to accommodate the surface area. Side Burners: Cook or heat up side dishes while you attend to the grill with a Weber model that features one or two side burners. Saving space doesn't have to mean sacrificing flavor. Top-tier Weber propane grills come in smaller sizes that are ideal for any backyard, patio and deck. Use these tips to find the right small Weber grill for your outdoor cooking needs: Consider a semi-portable option. Grills with two wheels are easy to set up and break down when you need to move the party. Using a semi-portable grill can give you ample grilling space without dominating your backyard all the time. Look for a grill with a side burner or storage shelf. Small grills can still be plenty flexible with the addition of a burner for side dishes and storage space for your favorite sauces and Weber grilling accessories. Shop for a portable propane grill.
